

The Intelligencer.

OFFICE: No. 15 Quincy Street.

THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1872.

A Disposition with a Difference.
The Register is welcome to quote as much as it likes—and it can certainly quote a great deal if it chooses—from the columns of the INTELLIGENCER, in favor of a railroad and a bridge, on the general merits of the question. We are quite as desirous as the Register or any of its crowd of seeing these added to the public improvements of the city. But when we are asked to support the particular schemes by which certain parties propose to secure these improvements, it becomes a very different question. We are bound to make inquiry as to their ability and good faith. It needs yet to be shown that the organization styled the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway Company can, or in good faith intends, to build the road we want. That they can and will absorb the $300,000, if given to them, we have no doubt. But if that is spent without bringing us a road, we will be farther off from having one than ever. Everything done in the matter of the contract both by the company and by the contractor looks as if neither party ever expected to carry things through to a consummation; but as it all parties were intent on getting the subscriptions of this and a few other cities into their hands at all hazards, leaving the future of the enterprise to take care of itself.

In the matter of the bridge scheme as it stands, there is not even a pretence of giving the city any protection. We are asked to put down three hundred thousand dollars to a company not yet organized, and only as yet half chartered. We are not to wait till somebody else subscribes an equal sum or any sum. How do we know but this will be the only actual subscription ever made, except it be further subscriptions by the city? There has been a pretence that the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Company would subscribe something. A gentleman who has conversed with Mr. McCollough on the subject assures us he will not subscribe a dollar and never contemplated doing so. If he will, why has not the sub-railroad committee of council who waited on him reported the fact long since? It has been suggested—as a means of amusing our people in the interest of the railway scheme, that the W. & L. E. railway would subscribe $400,000 to the bridge—a company that has not to-day $100,000 of actually subscribed stock (out of $2,000,000 required), and which is now asking this city for $500,000 as the only possible means of ever accomplishing anything at all. Suppose this suggestion were ever carried out, if such thing is at all possible, the control of the organization would be at once fall into the hands of the parties who would take the contract for the bridge. The $300,000 which the city would have to pay down in cash, before an organization could be effected would go directly into their hands. Who can say what kind of security the city would have that ever a step further would be taken? It nobody subscribed but the city, where is the rest of the capital to come from? Eight or nine hundred thousand dollars cannot be placed on a basis of $300,000. The $300,000 would be spent, we suppose, in starting the piers. Then we should have to put in another three hundred thousand to get them ready for the superstructure, and then where would the rest come from? The gentlemen who are handling this bridge scheme are painfully reticent about their plans. They leave us all in the dark as to how they propose to proceed after they get this $300,000. Is the getting possession of that as far as their plans extend? Does it seem likely that the way to secure the actual building of a bridge is to vote our money to this embryonic organization, which has yet neither an organized existence nor any plan of action known to the public?

And, therefore, men may earnestly desire to have a railroad and bridge built, and may be willing to vote generous aid to build them, and for that very reason oppose voting a dollar to the parties who are now trying to crowd these subscriptions through under pressure from Wall street brokers; because if the subscriptions are voted and lost, the city will be sadly crippled without having either railroad or bridge to help her up, and we shall be further away than ever from the consummation we so much desire.

It is from such considerations as these that we advise our citizens to sit these propositions critically before they give them an approving vote.

A Word With the Small Tax Payers.
There is an industrious effort to make the workmen of the city, and others who have but small taxable property, vote the subscriptions, Saturday, on the ground that the capitalists are generally opposed to it, and that the interests of the two classes, assuming that they may be so divided, are antagonistic. Those who have little property are told that if these subscriptions are voted they will not have any of it to pay; that the property holders will have to pay it all, while it will make money and work plenty and give them prosperities times. This is an insidious view of the question, but not a just one. There is no antagonism of interests in this matter between the non-property holder and the large property holder, the small capitalist and the large capitalist. If the subscriptions are voted and by their aid the enterprises are successful, it would do much to make work and money plenty, and would be of great permanent advantage to the city. Nobody would profit more by such a state of things than the capitalist, for capital has every advantage in improving opportunities afforded by flush times. So, if the capitalists believed the voting of the subscriptions would secure the building of the road and bridge they would naturally be in favor of voting them. On the other hand, if they are voted and through unforeseen contingencies or carefully laid plans, the enterprises should break down after our subscriptions were exhausted, all these anticipations of benefits to be derived would be disappointed; and in addition to that we would have made an enormous addition to the load of debt and taxation the city has already to carry. The direct loss would be $300,000 and it might be so contrived by the managers as to make it $1,200,000, the city being liable for double its subscriptions. Without the compensating effects of success, such a debt would make taxation simply crushing, and every business interest in the city would feel it. Nor need the small-tax-payers flatter themselves that under such circumstances they would not have to carry a share of it. Labor after all has to pay its full share of all taxes, if not ultimately pay them all. Capital is always able to take care of itself.

When taxes are increased the first place it is felt in is an increase of rents. Not only the amount of additional tax is added to the rents, but more. An increase of rents increases all the costs of living. The merchant, the baker, the butcher, the grocer, must all add something to their profits to pay the additional rent, and thus every man is reached. Those who do not pay the taxes directly pay them indirectly. The load at last comes down to the poor man, and he takes up his share of it when he pays for the daily necessities of life.

The poorest man in the city to-day, though he may not pay a dollar of taxes directly into the city treasury, has a proportionate interest in the protection of the city against any loss; and he is bound in duty to himself and his family, before voting for these subscriptions, to scrutinize the propositions closely and satisfy himself that all the conditions are fair and just, and perfectly safe, so that the city would be fully secured against loss.

Mr. Hugh Blomhard Willson.
Mr. H. B. Willson, who says he is an eminent financier from New York, of the highest standing in all the money markets in the world, adds this postscript to a letter in yesterday's Register in reply to Mr. Ross J. Alexander:
"I have omitted to say that Mr. Alexander informed me that the editor of the INTELLIGENCER owns a small farm up the valley of Wheeling Creek, and would highly approve of the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad if the line were changed to that valley."
H. B. W.

This might do for some anonymous scribbler in the Sunday Service, but for a dignified gentleman from Wall street, we submit it is hardly in keeping with its source—unless we are mistaken in supposing the writer to be a dignified gentleman, accustomed, as he tells us, to handle millions and to have great railway schemes crowded upon him from all parts of the country.

It is part of the plan of the Railroad Bridge Company to put a free foot walk on each side of the railroad track on the bridge. Pedestrians may then cross to the island and on to the Ohio side free of charge.—Register.

Seeing that nobody has proposed that the bridge should touch the island, but that the proposition is to build it clear above the island; that if it were proposed to touch the island the law of Congress recently passed will not allow a bridge to be built where it will do this; and seeing further, that communication by bridge for pedestrians between the east bank and the island is the exclusive franchise of the Wheeling & Belmont Bridge Company, we judge this part of the railroad company's plan is just about as likely to be realized as other parts of it.

A GENTLEMAN of Milledgeville (Ga.) wants to be $5,000 that HORACE GREELY will not receive the Democratic nomination at Baltimore; and $5,000 that Gen. WINFIELD SCOTT Hancock will. We are glad to notice these signs of increased prosperity at the South.
